

NON-ALLOCATED JAMESONS

These Jamesons have not been determined to have an index(see index) though no doubt research will eventually show that they will be connected at some later date. The research here stopped in 1993. There are over a hundred pages of notes I took while scanning the state library here in Connecticut and up in Boston.

Guidelines: Christian name, surname followed by the state discovered in and what information was dug up at the time. If for any reason you fail to locate a source, contact me and I'll try to locate the original reference. Alphabetically indexed, generations are represented by symbols, some times numbers or letters and indented to show generations. An underlined person or couple states there is more data on the family by going to the underlined people.

Notes:

Under a rising star that set him apart from others, David Jamison came into this world in the same year that Charles Stuart II was restored to the throne in 1660. Who would know that a scant 20 years later Jamison would be up against such a formidable foe as the King of Scotland. With the revolution(often called the Civil War or the Reign of Terror and Virtue) at an end religious toleration briefly flared. With Charles' return to the throne, however, Parliament took over financial responsibility of the Kingdom and the end of toleration commenced soon afterwards. In the early 1680s, a great many disassociated themselves with the established Church with religious and political groups existing in defiance of Charles' restricted orthodoxy. Out of the unrest the dissenters and non-conformists became a power unto themselves drawn mainly from the ranks of the middle classes and artisans. The Puritan's influence, since Cromwell, had faded but was no less a factor as were a dozen more groups on the lunatic fringe. This rising confluence of individual interests soon would help spark the Glorious Revolution of 1688 and 1689.

Among the many dissenting affiliations emerged a semi-religious band of non-conformists better known as the "Sweet Singers". With a college education from Edinburgh and raised from an upper middle class family, David Jamison joined the growing brotherhood of Scots against the Stuarts. In his opposition to Charles, David Jamison, among other leaders of the agitators, was eventually rounded up and cast into the Tolbooth prison in Edinburgh, a dark dreary affair. In 1685, after a short stay, Jamison, banished from Scotland, was released into the hands of Reverend Clarke, the Minister of the fort at New York in the American colonies. Advancing the young man money, David was indentured for a short term which he repaid by teaching Latin soon after his arrival in North America.

In 1660, Jacob Leisler(1640-1691) arrived in new Amsterdam. On the outbreak of the Glorious Revolution in 1689, Leisler led the revolt against Lt. Governor, Francis Nicholson, who represented the government of James II. On May 1, the citizens of New York City seized the forts and funds of the administration as Leisler declared himself for the Protestant party under the auspices of King William and Queen Mary. He governed for two years at the end of which Jamison became Clerk under the court of Matthew Clarkson in 1691 that condemned Jacob Leisler and hung him for treason. Unable to remain aloof of these struggles due to his combative nature, David Jamison made many enemies, some of whose more outspoken remarks found their way into the newspapers.

All the while Jamison studied law. An adherent of Gov. Fletcher, he came under the scrutiny of Governor Bellamont, Fletcher's successor, who knew of David's involvement in Scotland and the report that he "was condemned to be hanged..for blasphemy and burning of the Bible." Bellamont, named Richard Coote(1636-1701) Governor of New York, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire from 1697 to 1701 when he died. A supporter of William, Prince of Orange, Coote received his commission under William and Mary and later was involved in a scandal involving the pirate Captain Kidd. Coote brought Jamison under his wing, none-the-less, even though they were on opposite sides, but the relationship was a stormy one and ended when Earl Bellamont died in 1701. It was in 1697 that Esquire Jamison was made Freeman, and two years later was Vestry of Trinity Church.

In 1684, Francis MaKemie(1658-1708), born in County Donegal, Ireland, went to Maryland. As the "Father of American Presbyterianism" he traveled widely to pass the gospel from Virginia to new York. in 1707, the same Queen Anne endorsed the Act of Union which combines England, Scotland, and Wales into Great Britain, Rev. Makemie was arrested for preaching "without license" in a private house. David Jamison defended him. Arguing the political necessity of toleration in the colonies, David advocated the legal argument that Parliament's Act of Uniformity and Toleration did not apply in America. While Makemie was acquitted, the Presbyterian ended up serving two months in prison anyway. but Jamison's decision reversed the Uniformity Act marking the end of Protestant persecution in north america. This single instance won him the regard of Lord Cornbury and propelled his career immeasurably.

In 1711, Jamison was appointed Chief Justice of New Jersey by then Governor Robert Hunter. In this capacity, the executive functions of New York and New Jersey were combined, and a unified administration of the two regions shared. The following year he was also named Recorder of New York City and commissioned to the post of Attorney-General. When, in 1723, he left this post, William Treat Jamison succeeded him.

In 1716, in court at Burlington County, Jamison introduced so many pertinent extracts from the old and new Bible that many thought him to be a learned theologian as much as an astute lawyer. In 1723, he was removed from his post in New Jersey where residency was required. In the following 17 years to his death he held the offices in government as in those of his religious faith. Governor Hunter called him, "the greatest man I ever knew!" Through his efforts the Church of England had created many establishment in colonial America. While Gov. Bellamont declared that Jamison was a bigamist, Hunter refuted this, though admitted that "there was a woman by whom he(Jamison) had a child in his wild days."

David Jamison was born 1660 in either Lithgo or Edinburgh, Scotland. He died July 26, 1739 in New York City, well known, respected, and admired for his courage, convictions, and dedication to his faith and his ideals. A number of his defenses at the Bar described American legal opinion for decades, his insightful perceptions of law, knowledgeable understandings of religion and politics brought the volatile mix of human nature into line. He settled down in Dutchess co., NY with his second wife, Johanna. In a petition dated September 18th, 1730, he was named with others as an owner(deceased) of a lot in Dutchess county that extended 16 miles up Waffingers Creek.

(6) Margaret, b.c. 1741; m. 1766, John Loughhead?

son, William, b. 7/19/1768;

Notes:

In 1723, William Jamison took over the post of Attorney-General in New York City after his father, David Jamison. He signed October 22, 1728 a petition with Richard Bradley for a grant of 4000 acres in Ulster and Orange counties, New York. He was appointed by the State of New York to sue for Letters of Administration in trust for John Johnson, creditor, August 11, 1729, and in February of 1731 he was made a Freeman. His son, John Jamison, who resided in Wawayenda, orange co., NY, was administrator, September 20, 1768 appointed by James Thompson of Goshen, principal creditor bondsman. His son, David, requested David Johnson, merchant of New York City be appointed his guardian May 30, 1754. It appears his father, William, died some time in that year.

(4) David Jamison [William, David], was born about 1736 in New York City the son of William T. Jamison(2). He was the son and heir of William Jameson who petitioned for a grant of lots in the Minisink Angle May 8, 17--; he married Elizabeth Johnson November 6, 1763 in New York City. His father died in 1754 and 5/30/1754, "praying that David Johnson of New York City, merchant, may be appointed his guardian".

EDWARD JAMESON(ME), "Ed Jameson figures he must have spent hundreds of hours cleaning gunky grass clippings out of his riding mower before the inventor's fairy bonked him on the head. The answer was Mowr-Kleen. Jameson invented a plastic device that hooks up to a garden hose and clips onto the side of a lawn mower. By turning both the hose and the lawn mower on, water sprays through the Mowr-Kleen, gets whirled around by the mower blades, and washes grass clippings clean away. To make Mowr-Kleen a reality, Jameson refinanced his home in Yarmouth, Maine, and took out a U. S. Small Business Administration loan. "My wife is a pure pessimist. She was scared, she was scared," he said.<sup>(u)</sup> But Jameson said he's sold 125,000 devices since February and is looking to make it really big. Jameson was one of more successful of the 65 inventors pushing ideas Thursday at the Yankee Invention Exposition at Naugatuck Valley Community-Technical College. The expo tries to help frustrated inventors learn to sell their ideas, which in turn will help the state economy, according to Debbie Harris, the event's marketing director. Whether it was a cleaning device, a new board game, a way to protect bird feeders from squirrels, or something that promises to save your lide, the inventors gathered to share tips about how to cash in on their ideas. Jameson gave some of his own advice: "It's stubbornness, stupidity, whatever you want to call it. You have to have drive, and it's constant, constant hard work.":-Journal Inquirer, Friday, October 17, 1997, page 29;

EX-OKLAHOMIAN, PROMINENT COLORADO JOURNALIST DIES AT 79: Colorado Springs, Colo.(AP)- John A. Jameson, a longtime Colorado journalist who helped to establish the right to comment publicly on court decisions, died Saturday at his home here. He was 79. Jameson, who once headed the Associated Press operations in Colorado and Wyoming, died from a heart ailment. During his career which included 22 years with the AP, Jameson covered the Eisenhower presidential campaigns and the summer White House in Denver. While publisher of the Englewood Herald, Jameson was cited for contempt of court by the Colorado Supreme Court because of an editorial he wrote attacking a decision. The Court later held by a 4-1 vote that Jameson did not commit criminal contempt since the editorial did not pose an "imminent peril to the administration of justice." Jameson started his journalism career as news editor of the Muskogee, OK Daily Phoenix. He later worked as a reporter with the The Oklahoman in Oklahoma City, and joined the AP in 1935. After stints at AP bureaus in Kansas City, New York, and Indianapolis, he came to Denver as bureau chief in 1951. Jameson retired from the AP in 1956 to become publisher of the Englewood Herald for 12 years, then served as director of the Regional Advisory Councils of the Small Business Administration in Washington, D.C. until 1975. Survivors are his wife, Ethel, and two children.

JUDITH JAMISON, b. 1943, African American modern dancer who became artistic director of the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater in 1989. Jamison received her initial ballet training in Philadelphia, with Marion Cuyjet, and left her studies at Fisk University to make her career in dance. She studied dance and ballet at the Philadelphia Dance Academy, now the University of the Arts, where she later became a visiting distinguished professor. Discovered by Agnes de Mille, Jamison made her New York City debut with the American Ballet Theatre. In 1965 Alvin Ailey recruited her for his dance company. Her height (5 feet 10 inches) and elegant, striking presence helped make her an immediate success with the company. Jamison went on to create roles in many of Ailey's best-known ballets, most notably the tour de force solo CRY, a tribute to African American women, which became her signature piece. She performed both in the United States and abroad. Miss Jamison left Ailey's company in 1980, appeared on Broadway in the musical SOPHISTICATED LADIES, and performed as guest artist with dance companies throughout the world. In 1988 she founded her own company, the Jamison Project, which later merged with Ailey's company. Upon Ailey's death in December 1989, she succeeded him as artistic director of the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater. Jamison's autobiography, Dancing Spirit, written with Howard Kaplan, was published in 1993.

Mr. Jameson married August 23, 1786, Albemarle co., VA., Martha Page[1]. They resided in Albemarle co., VA. Children:[2] (Born Albemarle co., VA.)

(1) son, b.c. 1784-1793; (2) daughter, b.c. 1784-1793;

(3) daughter, b.c. 1784-1793; (4) son, b.c. 1794-1803; (5) son, b.c. 1794-1803; (6) daughter, b.c. 1794-1803;

Notes: On petition of Nathan Jameson, assignee of John Shields against Thomas Chinn, the court ordered that plaintiff Jameson recover against Chinn[3]. Dated February 11, 1811, Nathan Jameson produced a certificate to CharlesYancey a justice of the peace for this county, a grown wolf's head which is ordered to be entered into record[3]. Surety for Nathan and Martha Page's marriage was provided by George Modrall{Moderal}[1]

Ancestry: Nathan Jameson could possibly be a son of Samuel and Jane (McColloch?) Jameson (30489). In a deed issued October 23, 1839, Albemarle co., VA. a Deed of Trust from Joel Yancey to John Cocke, Samuel Jameson(30658) sells real and personal property of Yancey to satisfy debt to Cocke[4]. Because of the Yancey surname and the residence of an Andrew Jameson in Albemarle co., VA. in 1820 there is a remote possibility that these people were related to Andrew Jameson of Rockingham co., VA. (see Indexes 38100 & 41312 for further details). The surname Stephenson also has connections with both families as does Davis.

PATRICK JAMESON(ME), res. Thomaston, Lincoln co., ME; 1830 ME Census, p.182;

PATRICK JAMESON(SCOT)(MA)(NH)(ME), Who was Patrick Jameson? Where did he and 270 prisoners of war come from? How was he related to Andrew Jameson, Neile Jameson, and David Jameson?

The Great Rebellion applied to the civil wars in England and Scotland fought between Charles I and his Royalist supporters on the one hand, and Parliament and its Puritan sympathizers on the other. These wars are generally divided into the First Civil War, 1642-46, and the Second Civil War, 1648-49. The Royalist, including most of the nobility and their peasant retainers, the Roman catholics, and the Episcopalians all referred to as Cavaliers; the Parliamentarians, including the middle classes, the prosperous merchants, the Presbyterians, the navy, and the nucleus of a powerful new army were all called Roundheads, since they wore their hair closely cropped in scorn of the Royalist fashion of wearing ringlets.

The issues were both political and religious. The Roundheads saw such instruments of policy as the "Petition of Right" and the "Great Remonstrance" in being able to air their grievances of high-handed affairs perpetrated by Charles I and his officials in regards to continually higher taxes, oppressive even to many prosperous and wealthy peoples; unwarranted arrests and imprisonment; and the invocation of martial law in times of peace. Regarding religion the Presbyterians were outraged by Charles' adaptation of a semi-Catholic "High-Church" worship throughout the land. The Scottish Presbytery responded with the Solemn League and Covenant for the preservation and protection of the reformed religion, the abolishment of episcopacy, and the raising of an army against the King. At this time Oliver Cromwell advocated that the Parliament should assume control of the nation's military establishment. But the King decreed that treason had been committed and thus ordered the arrest of five of the Covenantors, but lacking the military might, was unable to take them into custody. Parliament, then, made several overt demands which Charles refused and consequently the lines were drawn and military action replaced the infighting between the Cavaliers and the Roundheads.

When the Second Civil War broke out, Cromwell was the acknowledged leader of the Parliamentary army. He led a division to Wales and over came the Scottish Nobles in Pembroke Castle by starving it to submission. In 1648, he defeated the Scots in a three day battle near Preston, Lancashire and marched on to Edinburgh. After the war he sat on the High Court of Justice which tried King Charles I and executed him. In 1649, Parliament established a "Commonwealth" and Cromwell was put in charge of its military forces. He was sent to Ireland to over take the force that attacked and defeated a contingent of Parliamentary troops. In May of 1650 he returned to England to undertake an expedition to Scotland. On September 3, 1650 he defeated the Scottish army taking 10,000 prisoners at the Battle of Dunbar, located east of Lothian on the south shore of the Firth of Forth, approximately 30 miles north east of Edinburgh and less than seven miles from Garvald. The Covenantors lost 3000 men during the action. From here they were shipped out to the colonies. It is from this battle that Patrick Jameson along with Andrew, Neile, and David originated. From Midlothian and Eastlothian among the many inhabitants of the time were many of the name of Jameson and it would seem that the records would call them up.

Cromwell writes, "...And it naturally followed as the easiest solution of the "exceeding trouble" occasioned by the "numerousness" of prisoners to ship them off to the colonies to be sold to service for a term of years". In a letter dated May 28, 1651, Rev. John Cotton of Boston says, "They have not been sold for slaves to perpetual servitude, but for six or seven or eight yeares, as we do our owne..." until they repay their debt and their liberty restored.

Patrick and Andrew Jameson remained in New England upon arrival, serving out their time, though it is unknown what became of David and Neile Jameson. It is a good bet, however, they went on to Barbadoes as part of a list of passengers aboard the John and Sara of London, John Greene, Captain, consisting of two hundred and seventy-two persons who were shipped and consigned to Mr. Thomas Kemble, as slaves in New England and for transplanting to the Barbadoes."

Patrick Jameson remained in Boston for most of his six years indentured. In 1657 tax records record him as Patrick the Scot in Oyster River, Dover, New Hampshire. Employed by Val Hill of that town he states that Jameson was a useful servant about his mill, exemplary in his tasks and duties. So much so that Hill transferred land over to Patrick the Scot in 1659 who in the succeeding years was regarded as a good citizen and neighbor. In 1663 Jameson attained as much recognition as one might see fit when he was admitted a freeholder and inhabitant of Dover. On July 26, 1665, the citizens of New Hampshire felt it their obligation to free themselves from the rule of the Massachusetts Bay Colony and signed their names to a petition in that consideration. Patrick was one of the many signers of this document.

Yet, in the years to come, Patrick Jameson became not the model citizen as it appears painted in the records, but to have slipped into a troublesome period which he seemed not able to overcome for the remainder of his life in New England. In September of 1669 Mr Jameson was ordered under indictment to return to Boston for the mistreatment and molesting of Grace Roberts, age 8, of Oyster River, New Hampshire. The crime caused an unflinching amount of interest among the populace and an unprecedented amount of special activity in the law courts. Such was the anguish exhibited by the patrons of the justice system that a law was heralded into existence condemning the actions of Patrick Jameson and setting sentence of death by execution. This occurred October 13, 1669, only a month later, though, what punishment, if any, enabled Patrick Jameson to be in Saco, Maine, July 5, 1670, drunk and intoxicated, provides a mystery all its own. Subsequently, Patrick was bailed out by a Major Pendleton also of Saco. Four years passed quickly and the records yield in 1674 that Jameson was then residing in Yarmouth Falls, Maine at the home of Henry Sayward. Additionally, records include the following: Absent from a town meeting in Wells, Maine, 1675; October 2, 1678, he was administered to Samuel Austin.

This ends the narrative and life of Patrick the Scot, an apparent flamboyant personality who managed to hustle his way in and out of trouble. There is one exception, though, provides one more continuing mystery about him. Discovered in the Oyster River files was the following: baptized 28 January 1720-21, William Jameson, 3 days old. Did Patrick return to Dover after his conviction in Boston years later? Did he sire this child? Was he eventually reinstated as an inhabitant of Dover once again?

Notes: One of the first records appears on December 17, 1756, a patent on "Move About", granted in the Merryland Tract (Frederick co., MD) consisting of approximately 20 acres. It was located between the small draught in the lock of Coshocton Mountain about a half mile from Wanred Ryons, beholden of Conequocke Manor. This land was later sold in March 20, 1760 to John Boyon for 30 Shillings. "Samuel's Greiviences" was patented by him in 1761 and later sold to Conrad Hockensmith and wife Sarah released her power of thirds. On September 5, 1761, Charles Carroll of Annapolis, MD. sold to Jameson 120 acres of "Watson's Delight" which included the buildings and any improvements upon the land as well. Mr. Jameson died intestate, his son inheriting the entire estate under the laws then in effect. FOR MORE DETAILS SEE BENJAMIN JAMESON 35000.

(j) Susanna,            (k) Carroll,

Notes: Mr. Jameson purchased in November 23, 1770, for 50 pounds from Garrett Wilson "Second Addition of Brookes Discovery". On January 11, 1781, he bought from Christopher Ohaver of Frederick co., MD. a piece of property called "Addition to Brookes Discovery" which he purchased from Robert Miller, in which he got it from James Brooke. Both tracts border his father's estate, "Watsons Delight". On June 9, 1784 Mr. Jameson and wife, Jane, sold "Second Edition of Brookes Discovery" to Michael Barndoller for six pounds, three shillings, and nine pence. This land was situated near a tract called "Peggy and Molly Delight" and Piney Creek. He and Jane, then, sold to John Gwinn Jr. for 38 pounds a part of the tract called "Watsons Delight" on March 23 1786. Four years later on April 15, Robert and Jane Jameson sell to Thomas Jones 60 acres known as "Second Addition to Brookes Discovery". The Jamesons resided in Taney Town Hundred. On November 10, 1792, Robert Jameson and Eleanor, his wife, deed to John Groom, 10 1/2 acres of "Addition to Watsons Delight" that portion adjacent to "Brooks Desire" conveyed to Jameson by James Brooke.

Mr. Jameson's will was dated December 16, 1813, and probated May 3, 1815, Frederick co., Maryland. He bequeaths to son, Benjamin, the main plantation, separate from the land his son, John, already possesses, which was a part of "Watsons Delight". The residue went to son, John, and a dollar each to his children: Samuel, Susanna, Patrick, Jane, Sarah Garrett, Martha, William, and Robert. Executor, son, Benjamin Jameson. Witnesses: John M. Coskey & Hugh Shaw. Benjamin Jameson, however, did not serve nor would son John administer their father's estate writing to the court within ten days of his father's signing the will - "Gentlemen-I hereby relinquish my right of administration of my Father's Estate and take the liberty of recommending to your Honors Mr. Henry Spalding if you should think proper to grant him letters of administration on the said Estate your compliance will be much obliged, Gentlemen, your humble servant, John Jamison".

- Samuel Jamison, is he the one listed in 1790 Census for Washington county with 1 male over 16, 2 males under 16, 3 females and no slaves?

- Garrett Jamison, #45000, poss. a son of Robert Jamison Jr. Garrett had a son named Garrett Lewis Jamison.

- Robert Jamison #24200, poss. the Robert III listed. Born 1776, he m. Mary McWherter, and his family as Garrett's family moved together to Kentucky and later to Washington co., IN.

Notes: William and Dora Jameson came to Amarillo, TX. in 1923 with their family. Willie G. Jameson m. Nora Jameson in Amarillo, and shortly afterwards made all the oil fields, he as a carpenter and oil field worker, and Nora as a cook and in the wheat harvest fields until the Depression when they rem. to Oklahoma, made brooms for 20 cents an hour. Like many families of this time they traveled from one place to another families clinging together and sharing the meager rations and shelter available to them. In 1937, they returned to Texas settling at Pampa where they made their home. They first lived in a tent, sleeping in a two-wheeled trailer fitted with webbing and protective covering. These accommodations, then, were considerable, considering many around them used an old rag tied to bushes for protection. From the local auto scrap yard, Jameson with 30 cents of screws would construct metal stoves measuring 23" wide by 23" high by 14" deep with an opening for a stove pipe. This tent like home blew away after three months, and Jameson, now working for the local lumberyard, obtained the wood on credit and built himself a solid, well-built home for them; Gray County Heritage, Gray Historical Soc., 1985, ps.343,344;
